THE MARIONETTES AT WEST POIN

The wonderful company of puppets known as D'Aro's Marionottes continue to draw every evening crowded andiences to the neat little theatre at West Point, and the merits of the performance being now widely known large houses may be expected during this the last week of the troupo's stay. It is astonishing how the novel performance has "eaught ou" here, for as a rule the distance from the centre of the town militates against the saccess of any circus or onterover this disadvantage and so popular has the ally had to be turned away. Therefore to those into second place. From this point it was an then open a upon them and many were injured. performance, we would recommend an early visit. Marionottes are generally associated with for by the very indifferent and artificial looking also retired, her jib giving out somewhere. The Horse of Commons has been adjourned provinces at home, and which would scarcely appeal to an adult intelligence. In nearly such, the mannikins float into position in a manner which is very far removed from natural and their movements are so limited that the deception is a very thin one. At the theatre at presentatives has reported in favour of the Bland | West Point, however, we have a troupe of marionettes worked upon perfect scientific principles, costly dolls of almost life size which dance bonitchingly, speak their lines correctly, and doport themselves upon the stage with the vivacity and grace of living creatures. The method by which it is done is a mystery jealously guarded, but that it is well done, the continuous applause of crowded houses and the constant roars of langhter conclusively show.

The best features of the original programme are still retained, but now items have now been introduced which are not likely to in any meaance. The dances, especially those by the two niggers, are received every night with outhusiasm and the negro minstrels are frequently encored for their amusing efforts. The grand neither the noise made by the clock as it was set and would be consulted with regard to local pantomine of "Bluebeard," which has some spectacular effects not beaten, on our local boards, continues to be a thoroughly interesting portion of the entertainment, though one male part is rather spoilt by a distinctly. feminine voice: The black dwarf is irresistibly comical, and the wires must be manipulated in a marvellously skilful manner to keep the little fellow so constantly amusing. As before noted the harlequinade heats anything we have seen even at Drary Lane; for mirth provoking features. The house is kept laughing right through it, and the "Salvation Army" is always redemanded. Among the new items is a song by a coster representing Chevaller which is excellently rendered and vies with some of the best attempts of our own local exponent of coster linlect. A very funny scene is also introduced in which the clown and pintaloon, having ordered dinnor, proceed to scatter the visads all round their apartments.

THE FUTURE OF MACAO. TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS."

SIE,-The future of Macao, clouded and dreary as it is, has scarcely ever appeared in a more sombre aspect than in the article which under this heading is reproduced in your issue of the 5th instant from the Decennial Reports of the Imperial Maritime Customs. As the Commissioner of Customs for Lappa, Mr Hippisley enjoys the exceptional advantage of a full neight into the commercial prospects of Macao, an advantage which is turned to account in a masterly manner. The article in question is of indisputable merit when viewed as an expenent of the causes tending to the commercial decline

It is questionable, however, whether one or benefit the colony. That measure is the esablishment of a bonded warehouse at Macao controlled by the Chinese Customs. It is advocated on the ground that goods stored in such a warehouse would afford ample security for advances which, if made by a foreign bank at lower interest than that charged by nutive banks, would redound to the advantage of the colony. This would indeed be a most desirable improvement if with the establishment of the bonded warehouse the Chinese Customs might be relied upon as an institution friendly to the interests of the colony. Otherwise, what with the control and statistics of the warehouse officials, the trade of Macao and its outlets Ely, is dead. -might be scrutinised and acted upon in a manner adverse to the colony's interests and favourable towards the explansion of the outlying marts, a contingency which if realised might to a great extent family the next decennial report with the finishing touch to the picture of vesterday Mr. Justice Bayley sentenced Ahmed Macao as an atterly ruined emporium.

Moverover, a bonded warehouse at Macao that, as a free port, Hongkong offered facilities portation for life. which could not but draw thither the commerce of a neighbouring colony hampered with custom 10 duties. Nevertheless, the rise of Hongkong has been commensurate with the downfall Macao, If, based on the same status, difference is such, it may well be imagined what would be the result of a reversion to the former inequality. And if Macao, in self-preservation. must remain a free port, its reni interests would be better safeguarded in adopting only such measures as are in vogue at Hongkong. But whatever those measures might be, the fall of Macao as a commercial centre is sealed. In yiew of the rapid silting of the harbour, without any attempt at dredging, it only remains for well-wishers of the colony to fold their arms too and with philosophical equationity contem-
